The pace of environmental change requires organisations to adapt strategies that harness the drive, creativity, vision and ambition within a learning organisation where people continually expand their capacity to create the results they truly desire, and new and expansive patterns of thinking are nurtured.

Today's leaders and managers not only need skills and talent but also need to consolidate what they know and have.

Kawaida Collaborative Management Centre (KCMC) offers a range of short management courses, which focus on discrete facets of business management having being born as a result of extensive involvement in different industry sectors through provision of general management and change initiatives in reputable organisations in South Africa.

This combined experience and extensive knowledge provide a strategic direction in offering courses which have been structured to provide a 'menu' of critical capacity-building interventions that meet a range of needs for people with differing academic capacities and for those whose work requires specialised and focused skills.
